Breastfeeding
For Mom's mom's parenting

Having our this bundle a few months ago and getting back into a breastfeeding routine has been both amazing, yet stressful at the same time. With both other kids, I had major milk supply issues. I couldn't even nurse Landyn past three months and I had to really work hard trying everything in the books to increase my supply when we learned Lavery suffered from a dairy and soy allergy. Thankfully, I was able to surpass my struggle and nurse Lavery past her first year.

With Lakelyn this time around, my milk supply has been amazing from the start! While our breastfeeding relationship has been flawless, I know I need to have milk on hand for when I'll need to be away from her during a feeding. It's always my biggest fear I'll go through the pain of pumping a bunch of milk only to spill it or have something happen to waste all of that hard earned breastmilk! I was so excited to learn of the Milk-Saver to help me top off when I pump and not put any of that liquid gold to waste.

Wondering how it works? It's easy! You simply place the Milk-Saver in your nursing bra or tank while nursing on the opposite side your baby feeds on. It collects milk that drips while you're feeding on the other side so instead of filling up a nursing pad, you're collecting the milk to use later. Brilliant right!? Like, why didn't I think of that!? Here are my thoughts :

- It would be a LIFESAVER while you're really working on establishing your breastfeeding relationship. If you want an idea to put your baby registry – this is it!
- While I never got enough in my Milk-Saver for a full bottle, I was always able to use it to top off what I pumped and just add that little bit more. Plus, it made me feel so good knowing even that small amount wasn't going to waste.

- So easy to use. I keep it right by my nightstand in its own little stand and use it when I'm feeling full during a feeding (normally at night) then just wash and dry to use next time.

While it's a little bulky, it's not meant to be hidden in your bra while out and about; it's sole purpose is to collect any excess milk while you're feeding. So, while I wouldn't take it out with me while on-the-go, it's so perfect and compact to have on hand with you around the house to use while nursing. The only thing I think would be even more awesome is if you could somehow wear it while sleeping to collect the milk from the times when you're leaking at night. My little lady has been mostly sleeping through the night since three weeks old, so up until a few weeks ago; it felt like I was waking up to a puddle in the morning!

If you're looking for the perfect gift idea for a new mom, snag her an award wining Milk-Saver.. this truly is something unique yet so helpful and useful all at the same time!
